

Pre-generated Professor Characters

So, you'll be facilitating a run of A Wolf By Any Other Name! That means you're the professor who is running detention this night! The students got characters, so you need one, too! Feel free to make up your own, but here are two professors you can choose from. As with the students, you may choose to make up a first name. Or just be Professor _____!

Description: Professor Morbius is burnt out. They are an exceptionally proud individual, both of their general knowledge, of their "success" as a teacher, and of their contributions to Artificery. However, they have come to find that they do not like teaching, do not like students, do not like the other faculty, and do not like the school. So they do the minimum work possible to continue to get paid. In spite of being resentful of others, Professor Morbius doesn't wish harm on others. They will be quite appalled to discover the mistake that was made when they left detention, but then will be outraged when they are held responsible.

Opinions of Theory and Ethics of the Arcane: The Only Light In A World Of Utter Darkness

Description: Professor E McGraw is basically a hippy, but is secretly quite bitter underneath. They are quite proud of their knowledge and agile mind, and enjoy lively debates, but have little respect for others' opinions. They feel that their role is essential to the school's existence, and very quietly feel that they have a claim of ownership over it. Professor McGraw cannot ever admit to being wrong, and when they discover the mistake they have made when they left detention, will completely come unglued in their attempt to avoid being held responsible.
